

JACKIE BROWN

I grew up in a very small village in rural England and spent many hours watching my parents and grandparents play bridge. Finally, I learned enough to be able to play.

When I entered medical school, my bridge playing had to stop. I moved to the US in 1972. The next 40 years I spent raising four children and running my medical practice. I played social bridge infrequently during this time.

In 2013, I retired and started to play once a week. I now play almost daily! I am very grateful to the many talented players who help and encourage me as I strive to improve my game.

It would be my privilege to give back and serve on the Board for this game that I love so much. I feel passionate about the need to bring more of the newbie players back into face-to-face play, and I hope I can bring fresh ideas about this need, as well as play a full role in the many duties of the Board
