

DAVID STERNER

I learned to play bridge in college while earning Bachelor's and Master's degrees in Chemical Engineering at the University of Texas. I joined ACBL when playing on the IBM corporate bridge team in Houston, back when we got a paper slip after winning a fraction of a point.

I retired from IBM after a career working with customers to solve complex problems using hardware, software, and business solutions. I also managed a nationwide IBM quality project that resolved problems that were not being solved using normal support processes.

My continued support for the University of Texas includes the Longhorn Foundation and season tickets for UT Football.

I have held a number of volunteer positions.. Those include the Advisory Board of Elders at my church and the Home Owners Association Board in my current neighborhood.

I have also developed a love for pickleball. I'm working hard to improve in both sports.

I look forward to participating with the Board to support the Unit's activities. I will work to bring inactive players back to the Clubs, Unit games and Tournaments while enhancing the experience for all levels of players
